

The History of Grosvenor Square

1721 – Sir Richard Grosvenor began development for the area surrounding Grosvenor Square, which eventually became known as one of the ‘Beauties of England and Wales’.

1725 – After the completion of the square, the first plans for the garden at its centre were attributed to William Kent, and featured a grass square plot and a formal arrangement of shrubs.

1785 – Grosvenor Square’s connection to the United States began when John Adams resided in Grosvenor Square with his wife Abigail, prior to his 1797-1801 presidency.

1815 – Lieutenant Colonel The Honourable Henry Percy travelled to Grosvenor Square from Belgium, to give news to the Cabinet of their victory against Napoleon’s forces at the Battle of Waterloo.

1820 – Arthur Thistlewood lead radical group ‘The Cato Street Conspiracy’ to a meeting at Lord Harrowby’s home in Grosvenor Square, where they planned to murder the Cabinet. The attempt was foiled and Thistlewood was executed with his co-conspirators.

1888 – While residing on Grosvenor Square, Oscar Wilde developed a fascination for aesthetics in art. The fictional character Dorian Gray was a depiction of Aestheticism, and also resided on Grosvenor Square.

1927 – The Bentley Boys took residence in adjacent apartments on the south-east corner of Grosvenor Square. Infamous for holding days-long parties, the boys often lobbied cab drivers to refer to their corner as ‘Bentley Corner’.

1981 – The Italian Embassy was given a 200 year lease at number 4 Grosvenor Square by Hugh Grosvenor, 2nd Duke of Westminster. The building was entered via a private cul-de-sac Three Kings Yard, and was eventually joined to the home of the Italian Ambassador.

1984 – Steven and Virginia Courtauld lived on Grosvenor Square before relocating to Eltham Palace. Artist Leonard Campbell Taylor painted the couple drawing up plans for the new palace, with their pet lemur, Mah-Jongg.

1968 – Mick Jagger marched on the US Embassy on Grosvenor Square to protest the war in Vietnam. Legend has it that the events he witnessed inspired him to write Street Fighting Man and Sympathy for the Devil.
